After the great flood, God promised Noah that He would never again destroy the world with water. Noah built an altar to worship God and taught his sons to do the same.

So the people started to make bricks for their tower. But some people said, "Let's build a monument to the heavens for other gods." Some people said, "Let's build a monument to the greatness of our false gods."

God judged their false worship by confusing their language. People were no longer able to talk to each other. It is the first example of tongues in the Bible.

People had to scatter. Their great city and temple were neglected.
The people said, "Let's build a monument to the heavens for other gods."
